

LIBBY MOORE

After completing an arts degree, Libby went on to study graphic design before developing her art practice as a self-taught painter. At a mature stage in her life, she realised her long-held ambition to formally study fine art, enrolling at the National Art School where she majored in printmaking and graduated in 2025.

Working primarily with acrylics in her home studio on Wallumedegal land in north-western Sydney, Libby creates semi-surreal still life tableaux that explore themes of womanhood, maternity and domesticity. Her paintings depict sculptural and functional vessels that echo the female form, imbuing utilitarian objects with distinct personalities; often complex and uncompromising. Through prolonged observation and a kind of silent exchange, they become companions and quiet counsellors within her practice.

At Offmarket Gallery, Libby continues her dialogue with the glass and ceramic characters discreetly accumulating in her studio. In these works on paper and birch panel, the vessels become her protagonists through which she can reflect on the female experience and the cyclical patterns of human life.

Whilst studying and honing her work, Libby has been a finalist in numerous art awards in Australia, held solo exhibitions, and participated in many group shows. She is the recipient of the Hornsby Shire Local Artist Award and the Georges River Art Prize Acquisitive.
